" This week we bring you a story about a woman in Columbus, Ohio, who found a new way to live by using a toy 3D printer to make what she and her friends need in her kitchen. Click here to read the story. We've all heard of 3D printing. It's the technology that makes it possible to print objects out of plastic using a 3D printer that resembles a desktop inkjet printer. What you may not know is that it's not only for objects with a big appeal like cars and Barbie dolls. Last summer, Prusa Ink Ltd., the company behind the famous RepRap open source 3D printer, created the world's first fully functional toy 3D printer for children that is compatible with RepRap's open-source design. It's called the Kano and it's now available for $129. The idea behind the Kano is simple. Children can learn how to manipulate digital media, create their own 3D designs and make 3D objects from digital media they've uploaded to Kano's website. All they need is a computer and a Kano compatible printer. To put the Kano to the test, I had a group of kids (we were all Girl Scouts) use it to make a giant Rubik's Cube, a replica of the Candy Boxes in Pixar's Cars and a miniature farm. 82157476af
